Robinson+Cole Lawyer Joins Interval House Board of Directors

Appointment of health law lawyer Meaghan Mary Cooper reinforces firm's long-standing commitment to breaking the cycle of abuse

HARTFORD, CT (August 29, 2016) – Interval House, Connecticut's largest domestic violence intervention and prevention agency, has appointed Robinson+Cole attorney Meaghan Mary Cooper to its Board of Directors for a two-year term. Ms. Cooper focuses her practice on health law. She regularly advises hospitals, physician groups, community providers, and other health care entities on health care issues and general corporate matters.

Founded in 1977, Interval House has positively affected the lives of nearly 200,000 women and children who have experienced psychological and physical abuse at the hands of a domestic or intimate partner.

Robinson+Cole has a long-standing commitment to Interval House and its mission to provide services to prevent and break the cycle of family and intimate partner abuse, proudly serving as pro bono counsel for the organization for many years. Robinson+Cole attorney Eric D. Daniels is an honorary member of Interval House's Board of Directors and a founding member of the agency's Men Make A Difference, Men Against Domestic Violence™ group. Additionally, in 2012, working together with Interval House, Robinson+Cole launched the Domestic Violence Restraining Order Program, which gives victims of domestic violence, who otherwise would not be represented, access to attorney advice and help in navigating the court system.
